

Findings

1. Line Graph - In this graph, each line in this graph represents the percent of sustained and unsustained complaints over a period of time starting from 1985 to 2018. We have observed that the percent of unsustained complaints have increased between 1995 and 2006.
2. Box Plot - From this chart, we visualize the relation between the race of the police officer and whether the complaint on the officer sustained or did not sustain. We count the total number of sustained and unsustained complaints for the officers for each race and we infer that complaints against white officers remain unsustained generally.
3. Side by side bar graph - Each bar in the graph represents whether the complaints were filed by the police officers or by civilians.
